Guidance for staff

Tuesday 30 June 2020

Today we are sharing our re-engagement plan, and highlighting an opportunity to take part in an important national survey.

Re-engagement plan

The Healthcare Improvement Scotland Re-engagement Plan is available from a link in the guidance section of our COVID-19 page on The Source. This document reflects the current plan for the organisation’s re-emergence from the COVID-19 pandemic, but we will be reviewing it regularly to keep up with any emerging Scottish Government guidance. The plan is based on the four phases of the easing out of lockdown as set out in the Scottish Government’s own route map.

Early years resilience and impact survey

Are you a parent or carer of a child aged between 2 and 7 years old? If so, Public Health Scotland would like to hear about your experiences of life at home during the COVID-19 pandemic and how it may have affected the health and wellbeing of your family.

The survey should only take 10-15 minutes to complete and will help Public Health Scotland to understand more about the impact of COVID-19 on younger children in Scotland. Your feedback can help to ensure that children’s services can best respond to families’ needs when they re-open. The survey closes on 6 July.

Keeping up-to-date

As the guidance with which we’re all living our home and working lives is changing all the time, we’re keen not to inundate you with the same information over and over again. So, we’ve removed the ‘Keeping well’ section of the staff briefing and from now will just remind you to go to the Health Protection Scotland and NHS Inform.
websites for all of the current advice as and when you need them. You can also get the latest number of test results from the Scottish Government daily.
